Econocom, a European services group specialized in managing IT and telecom infrastructures, announces the launch of its new website, redesigned to reflect the company's new positioning, which places mobility at the heart of its client strategy.

Jean-Philippe Roesch, Group General Manager, says: "This site has been designed to be less corporate and more user-oriented, in order to promote our market positioning focused on "Mobility on Demand" emphasizing our business lines and areas of expertise, as well as our bundled offerings. Our goal is to make the perception of the brand evolve towards an integrated IT and telecom services group which offers innovative products to its customers, businesses and organizations."

With its optimized ergonomics and its simplified architecture and navigation system, which allow users to find any information in three clicks, this site includes new features such as:

- the ability to access content by user category (e.g., company, investor, candidate, journalist);
- "e-business" functionalities (e.g., links to biznet, econocomshop websites...); and
- use of Web 2.0 technologies (e.g., RSS feeds and tag clouds) for more interactivity.

The site is available in French, English and Dutch.

In order to constantly improve this tool, Econocom has created a section called "Your opinion". It will allow visitors and users to evaluate the site and make comments on its design, architecture, content, etc.

In addition, new developments are planned in 2009 including: new e-business functionalities, a database to allow the download of many documents or the development of video modules.
